the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are illiterate has increased from 1.2 billion to 1.5 billion.

There are many reasons for this. One is that the population of the world is growing. Another is that the number of people who are illiterate is increasing in many countries, particularly in the developing world. This is because of a number of factors, including a lack of access to education, a lack of resources, and a lack of political will.

One of the main reasons for the increase in illiteracy is the lack of access to education. In many developing countries, there are not enough schools, and the quality of education is often poor. This means that many children do not go to school, and those who do often do not learn to read and write.

Another reason for the increase in illiteracy is the lack of resources. In many developing countries, there is a lack of money to invest in education. This means that there are not enough teachers, and the schools are often overcrowded. This makes it difficult for children to learn.

A third reason for the increase in illiteracy is the lack of political will. In many developing countries, the government does not prioritize education. This means that there is not enough money invested in education, and the quality of education is often poor. This makes it difficult for children to learn.

There are many ways to reduce the number of illiterate people in the world. One way is to increase access to education. This can be done by building more schools, and by improving the quality of education. Another way is to increase resources for education. This can be done by increasing the number of teachers, and by reducing the number of students in each class.

Finally, it is important to have political will to invest in education. This means that the government must prioritize education, and invest the necessary resources. Only then can we hope to reduce the number of illiterate people in the world.

About Police and Crime Commissioners

On 2nd May, you will be able to vote for your Police and Crime Commissioner (PCC). The role of the PCC is to be the voice of the people and to hold the police to account.

Police and Crime Commissioners are elected to hold your police force to account for delivering the kind of policing you want to see. PCCs are responsible for the totality of policing in their force area and aim to cut crime and deliver an effective and efficient police service. PCCs bring a public voice to policing and they do this by:

- Engaging with the public and victims of crime to help set police and crime plans;
- Ensuring the police force budget is spent where it matters most; and
- Appointing the chief constable, holding them to account for delivery of their objectives, and if necessary, dismissing them.

The PCC does not “run” the police force. Chief constables continue to be responsible for the day-to-day operations of the police, but they are accountable to the public via the PCC.

In some Police Force Areas, PCCs are also responsible for Fire and Rescue Services, and are known as Police, Fire and Crime Commissioners (PFCCs). Furthermore, in some areas, neither a PCC nor PFCC is elected – instead there will be an election for a Mayor who will hold the PCC, PFCC or equivalent powers.

37 PCCs will be elected across England and Wales, of which 4 will be PFCCs – PFCCs are found in Cumbria, Essex, Staffordshire, and Northamptonshire.

Work with others

PCCs also work with your council and other organisations to promote and enable joined up working on community safety and criminal justice. As directly elected individuals, they provide opportunities for greater collaboration and effective scrutiny of public services. In doing so, PCCs also have regard to national cross border threats, and ensure there is an effective policing response.

Represent the entire community

PCCs are required to swear an oath of impartiality when they are elected to office. The oath is designed so that they can publicly set out their commitment to: serve all of the people in their Police Force Area; act with integrity and diligence; give a voice to the public; act with transparency so that they may be effectively held to account; and not interfere with the operational independence of police officers.

John Peter Crofts

Liberal Democrat

Election statement:

As a retired Headteacher and now a school governor in Norfolk I understand the importance of the educational work undertaken by the police in working with young people. This not only combats crime directly but is crucial to boosting the confidence of the wider community.

My priorities include:

Education

To be truly effective we must start with our children. Many schools have successful PHSE programmes, but few put enough emphasis on what constitutes crime, the impact it can have on both the individual and the community and most importantly how young people can avoid a life of crime. Everyone involved in the criminal justice system should go into schools and inform young people about a range of issues including: respect for women and minorities, theft, knife crime and county lines drugs gangs.

Community Policing

As a County Councillor I serve on the People & Communities Select Committee. I am acutely aware of the need to work with all members of the community. Good mental health provision is essential in understanding both those who commit crime and those who suffer from it.

We must address the many people in society who are victims of crime but feel ignored by the criminal justice system. This includes, amongst others, victims of domestic abuse and shop workers.

Rural Crime

Rural communities could be forgiven for feeling marginalised as well. The cost of rural crime in Norfolk surged by over 50% to £1.5m in 2022, and yet Norfolk Constabulary has no specified rural crime team, unlike other similar forces. This is outrageous, and an omission I aim to address if you elect me as your Police and Crime Commissioner on 2nd May.

Giles Rackley Orpen-Smellie

Conservative Candidate –
More Police, Safer Streets

Election statement:

Keeping Norfolk Safe

As your PCC: I would work for you to ensure that your concerns about policing, crime and community safety are heard and are acted upon.

My plan is to:

- Increase visible policing: to make our streets safer, especially for women and girls walking alone; with more resources to deal with speeding motorists, anti-social behaviour and shoplifting.
- Reduce high-harm crime: such as knife crime, which is increasing; drug supply, which persists with its violence and other criminality; and domestic abuse, which is reducing but still totals 18% of reported crime in Norfolk.
- Put victims first: to better support victims of crime by improving the service and support they get from the criminal justice system; to provide better support for victims of online crime.

- Address issues that cause crime: the police deal with individual incidents but a ‘public health ’approach, involving partnerships of public, private and charity organisations, is needed to deal with underlying issues that cause crime.
- Funding: Money is the fuel that drives policing. Careful control of taxpayer’s money is needed to get the best value for money.

I served 34 years in the Army so I understand the vocational, non-political, nature of serving the public. I also understand the police’s need for the support of the public, local authorities, private businesses and charities. The PCC can bring all these together, helping the police to focus on policing while wider partnerships deal with issues that cause crime. The police and public should go forward together.

Please help me to make this vision a reality by giving me your vote on 2nd May 2024

Martin Kenneth Albert Schmierer

The Green Party

Election statement:

I have grown up in Norfolk since I was a child. I love this county, its countryside, its people. Sadly, Norfolk is not immune to national problems associated with county lines drug dealing, while rural and community policing seems to be an afterthought for those in power. That's why I am standing to become Norfolk's Police and Crime Commissioner (PCC).

As someone who was Lord Mayor of Norwich and who has been a councillor for nine years, representing the area of Norfolk with the highest rates of crime in the county, I sadly see firsthand how crime and anti-social behaviour (everything from graffiti and fly-tipping to drug dealing) blights people's lives. Building on my experiences bringing the community and constabulary closer together in Norwich, I would do so elsewhere in Norfolk, so that people like you get to know their local police officers.

Over a decade of cuts to services have meant that people across Norfolk feel less safe than ever before. But the police cannot simply arrest their way out of the problems. We need a fundamental change in approach from national government to deal with the underlying causes of crime. There is clear evidence to show that rates of violence are higher in more unequal societies, and we simply must have a frank debate about drug reform. I will do exactly that, and I will be a powerful voice calling for a new approach to crime prevention.

Finally, I must say that the positions of PCC should never have been created. Policing should not be politicised. Therefore, if elected I will remain as independent-minded as possible and will never shirk from focusing on the issues that residents report to me.

Sarah Taylor

Labour and Co-operative Party

Election statement:

The Police and Crime Commissioner is the elected voice of local people and so should prioritise our needs and concerns. Talking with residents and businesses across Norfolk, people clearly want to feel trust and confidence in our police again.

As a child of an Armed Forces family, I have a natural respect for the police. It really concerns me that trust has been eroded and I urgently want to change this, not only for residents, but also for people serving in the police.

I work in road safety at a national level, scrutinising government decisions, and bringing together organisations to make sure that priorities are informed by evidence and that they respond to local needs.

If elected I will take the same approach. I will prioritise:

- Prevention, making us safer across the county, and reducing the numbers of young people drawn into crime.
- Making our roads safer by using the “Vision Zero” approach to reduce the numbers of people killed or sustaining life-changing injuries on our roads.

- Tackling violence against women and girls which accounts for some of the highest crime rates reported. High-profile scandals have drastically undermined many women's confidence in reporting crimes, leaving us feeling less safe. Confidence must be restored, and perpetrators brought to justice.
- Faster response times to crimes and improved support for victims, to improve the experience of residents and businesses in our rural areas.
- Addressing organized crime, whether it is County Lines, scams or shoplifting to order, and helping victims with what can be devastating effects.

I will listen to you. I will make sure that your priorities are the police's priorities, and I will work with communities across Norfolk to restore trust and confidence.
